Family History is not a resume of famous persons -- it is the story of the ordinary person, who faced good times and hard, and lived on, preparing the way for his children to grow and move forward. This book is a beginning. . . in the years to come we will surely learn more about those who came before, as we add to the list of those who came after.

ANTON PINGEL was born in Germany 1 Dec 1825. His wife, THERESIA, nee WIEDEBUSCH, was born 26 Jul 1827. They sailed from Bremen 2 May 1850, aboard the Itzstein & Welcker. According to their son Henry, they embarked for the United States soon after their marriage. They shared the steerage quarters with 242 others and evidently it was a good trip, since no one died on board. They arrived at New Orleans 8 Jul 1850. The shiplist says they were from Rothenburg, Germany, on the way to Missouri.

They homesteaded land in Perry County, Missouri, where they are the only Pingels in the early records. On 13 May 1853 Anton declared at the Perry Co. courthouse his intent to become a citizen. On 10 Sep 1854 he was the highest bidder for two tracts of land of 40 acres each, near the southern border of Perry Co., along Apple Creek, buying this land for $50. On 14 Nov 1855, having fulfilled the residency requirement of 5 years, he became an American citizen.

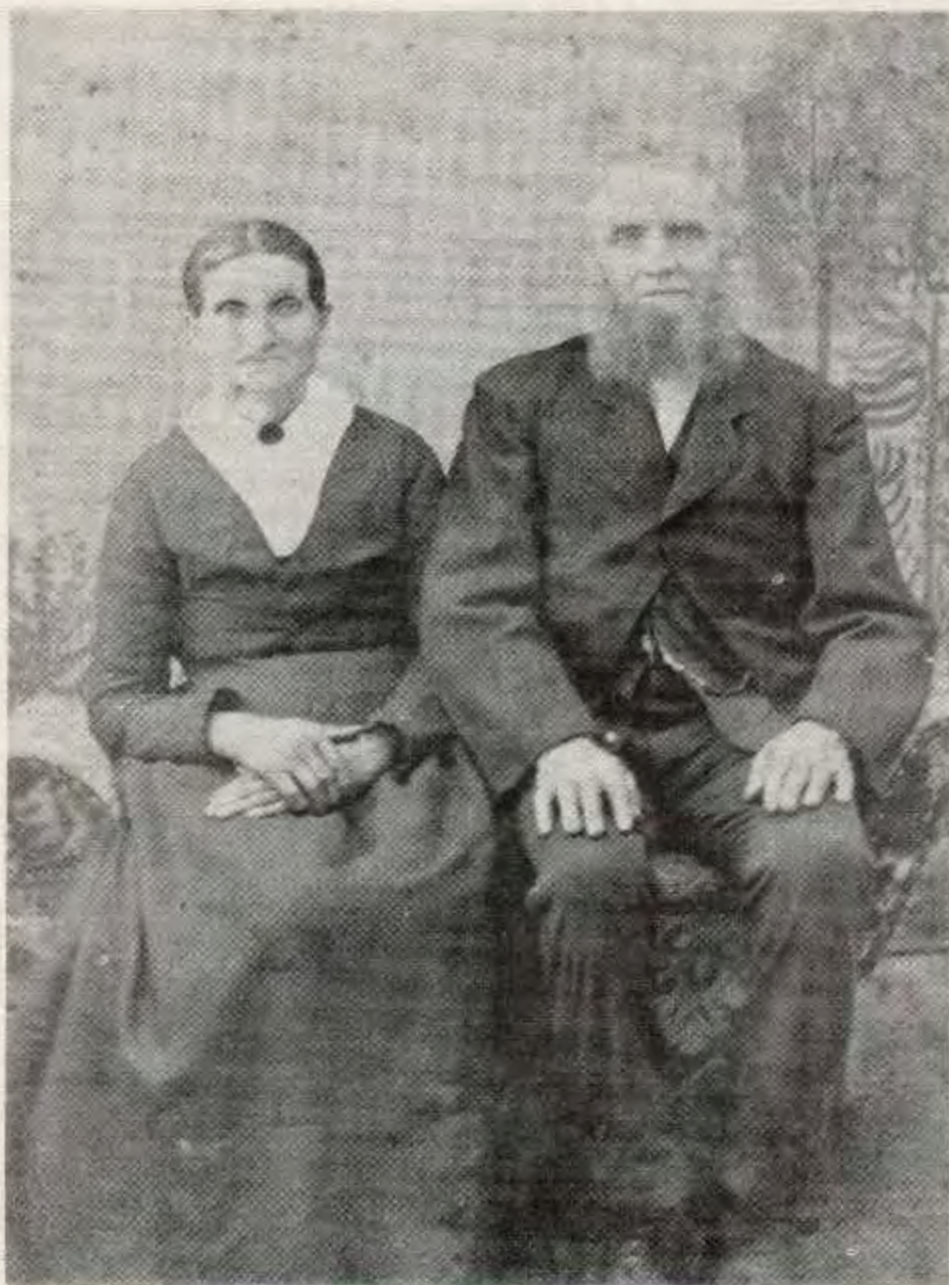

Anton Pingel first appears in the Perry Co. census in 1860 as a 34-year-old blacksmith. In 1868, he added to his land on Apple Creek, paying only $5 for another 40 acres. In 1872, he bought another tract farther north, where Highway '0' now runs, plus more land adjoining his original land on Apple Creek. In the censuses of 1870 and 1880, he states his occupation as 'farmer'.

All but the first and last of their nine children were baptized at St. Joseph's in Apple Creek. From the time of the formation of St. Maurus Church in Biehle, MO, in 1870, the Pingels are found in the records there.

In these early days, Indians frequently visited the area, demanding horses and food and taking hams from the smokehouses of the farmers. After hearing these tales, Anton Pingel's grandchildren, years later, would picture Indians hiding behind every tree.

ANTON AND THERESIA (WIEDEBUSCH) PINGEL

in June, 1888

During the Civil War, Anton was the only Pingel in the state to serve for the Union. At the age of 37, he was enrolled 10 Aug 1862 in Company C, 78th Regiment, Missouri Militia, as a sergeant. He served until 5 Dec 1864. His days of actual service during this period were only 36; evidently the militia was only called up for periods of local activity.

Along with the produce raised by Anton and Theresia Pingel, there were also vineyards planted in the rich Perry County earth. In April of 1871, Anton Pingel was indicted for 'selling liquor without a license on Sunday.' On 16 Oct 1871 he appeared at the courthouse in Perryville to plead guilty and pay his fine of $40 and costs.

Theresia Pingel died 3 Apr 1893 and was buried in the cemetery of St. Maurus in Biehle, Missouri. On 15 Jul 1899 Anton drew up an interesting document conveying 80 acres of his land for $1 to his son Frank:

reserving however for the use and enjoyment during his natural life, the use of the two rooms now occupied by him in the dwelling house on the premises hereby conveyed. Also the use of the vineyard on the premises with all the annual crops of grapes grown thereon during his life. The said Frank A. Pingel agrees and obligates himself to pay to grantor during his life an annuity of $20 per year, due on 1 Sep each year, (and) to provide for the use of (Anton) at all times a sufficient quantity of good and wholesome food as a member of the family, during his life, with proper care and attention in sickness. . and further furnish him all necessary food and shelter for one horse. Also without charge, all necessary fuel and light for (Anton) during life.

Anton died 23 Oct 1901 and was buried from St. Maurus in the church cemetery on 24 Oct.

EARLY APPLE CREEK

Apple Creek was prominent in the history of the Mississippi Valley from the earliest times. About 20 miles north of Cape Girardeau there were two villages of Shawnee and Delaware Indians on Apple Creek, known as large and small 'village sauvage.' Their relations with the white people were friendly. In the era of Spanish rule, a path (known as 'Shawnee Path' or 'trace') led from the residence of Don Louis Lorimier, the post commander at Cape Girardeau, to the two largest villages of Indians and from these villages to Ste. Genevieve and St. Louis. Another path, known as the Indian road, led up Apple Creek, west.

Pierre Menard of Kaskaskia, a trading partner of Peter Audrain, secured a grant from the Spanish authorities, where Apple Creek enters the Mississippi. "He probably had a trading house at this point, or supposed it would be a favorable point to locate such an establishment, because the villages of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians were not far from the mouth of Apple Creek." ²

About 1785, the first white immigrants settled in the Apple Creek area. They were Anglo-Americans moving west from Maryland colonies. A number of families arrived between 1826-1838 from the grand-duchy of Baden, mainly from the neighborhoods of Renchen, Moeschbach and Stadelhofen. In the next 15 years, many German immigrants bought out the Yankee colonists, taking over their holdings. Many of these settlers came from the Prussian towns of Endorf, Langenholthausen and Stockum, and others were from the Low German provinces of Hanover and Oldenburg, or from the Rhine-Bavaria region.

At St. Joseph's Church, the settlers of different German dialects vied with each other in erecting outdoor chapels. On the occasion of Corpus Christi -- 'Hergotts-tag' -- the priest would lead a procession of torch-bearing, bell-ringing altar boys, surrounded by choir members and the parish brass band, between two rows of flags and banners and under arches of cedar garlands, to the 'Bayerische' altar. Here, one of the gospels would be read and a short homily preached, before the cortege proceeded to the 'Badische' altar, then to the 'Platt deutsche' altar, repeating at each the same manner of ceremonies, before returning to the church. In these early days of St. Joseph's, "every girl, maiden and woman was compelled to wear a heel-length, ear-high black dress and to top it off with a black stiff shaker 'Armen Suender' bonnet when going to the Sacraments."³ Early parishioners climbed down to the cave-spring to get a drink of sparkling water. Church services were held in an unheated and bitterly cold church; later, smoking stoves were used before the installation of steam radiators. The people came to Mass in oxcarts and later aboard buckboards, barouches, and surreys, before the first Ford flivvers were seen in the area.

THE TOWN OF BIEHLE

About 8 miles from Apple Creek, and about 9 miles from Perryville, a log building was constructed on land donated by MAURUS BIEHLE to be used for the educating of the children to save them the walk to Apple Creek. In the 1850's and 1860's, church services were held here at regular intervals by the Lazarist Fathers from Perryville or secular priests from a neighboring parish. In May, 1867, the men of this community began to erect a church, and completed it about 1870. The first resident pastor was appointed in January 1870. The church was the nucleus of the town of Biehle, named for the man who donated the land and worked to bring the church there.

From 1905-1917 Houck's railroad connected Biehle with Chester, Illinois, and Perryville, Oak Ridge and Cape Girardeau. The train made one trip a day in each direction. The Biehle depot was directly across the road from the church.

A post office was commissioned for Biehle and established 24 Jun 1867 in Biehle's General Store, next to the Biehle home. About 1887, when Maurus Biehle built a new brick store across the road from his home, the post office was in this building; it remained there until 1935. MAURUS BIEHLE was the town's postmaster until Oct 1890. The town's 4th postmaster was ANTON F. PINGEL from 1896-1903 and again 1904-1907.

FRANK ANTON PINGEL and MARY WILHELMINA LAPPE were married 20 September 1886 at St. Joseph Church in Apple Creek, Missouri. Surely they had known each other for their entire lives, since they were baptized at St. Joseph's, he on 1 November 1864, and she on 17 April 1865, only two pages apart in the record book.

Frank was a carpenter. In 1888, he listed his occupation as 'wagonmaker.' He helped build barns, homes and room additions in the area of Biehle, Missouri.

Each of their 13 children was baptized at St. Maurus Church, Biehle, within a few days of birth. The young Pingel children went to the school in Biehle: a one-room school with a big stove in the middle of the room, and an outhouse. Some of the other pupils were cousins, on both the Pingel and Lappe sides.

Since Frank, being a carpenter, was frequently gone from home on a job, much of the farming chores fell to Minnie, and, as they grew up, the children. Long rows of sweet potatoes had to be tended in the field. Beans were planted with the corn so they could climb up the stalks. The beans were hulled and dried for winter. Potatoes were raised in the garden. Clothes were scrubbed on a board, then hung out to dry. In the winter, the heavy clothes would freeze stiff, and be brought inside to finish drying. Baking day would be ironing day also, so the irons could be put on the hot stove, making one fire do double-duty. The children would frequently awaken to see Minnie sewing by lamplight, quilt blocks or button holes, after having built the fire in the kitchen stove to bake the big pan of cornbread that would be their breakfast, served with sorghum molasses, cottage cheese or homemade apple butter. Leo and Arnold would split wood until the wood pile was higher than the picket fence, since it took a lot of wood to feed the heating stove and the cook stove. Minnie believed in teaching her children to do all the tasks, and so Clara, who loved to work outside and Elizabeth, who loved to stay indoors to sew, cook and tend the baby, each had to take their turn at the kind of tasks they didn't prefer. Every scrap of new material left after shirts and dresses were made was saved for quilt blocks, and the boys as well as the girls learned to sew them. Sheep were sheared, and their wool was sent off for processing and returned in yard-long round strips, twice as thick as a pencil in a big bundle. Minnie would sit down to the spinning wheel, pumping a foot treadle, with both hands on the wool strips, working it to join every strip, the yarn wrapping on a large spindle. Next, this was made into hanks by being wrapped on a pair of hands of whatever child was able to hold his hands about a foot apart, and then tied. The hanks were dyed to the desired color, then wrapped in a big ball ready for knitting. Anne recalls how her mother Minnie could make the knitting needles fly. All of the children had woolen socks. Frank tapped the maple trees, inserting a wooden pipe cut for the purpose, to drip day and night into containers. The children went periodically to collect it. A big black kettle was set to boil out in the yard over a wood fire to make the syrup. Frank maintained an acre vineyard and made wine. A big keg was kept in the cellar and all one had to do for a glass of cool, sweet wine was turn the spigot. Anne recalled one Sunday afternoon when a lot of company gathered. The men drank wine as it came from the barrel. For the women and children, Minnie took a pitcher of cool water and added sugar and wine.

The Pingel house and barn was on a bluff with a spring-fed branch running into the lovely creek with clear water in front of the house. Their drinking water was mostly from a cistern, but after a hot day in the fields, a cold drink of spring water was a special treat. The spring was so cold that one could not stand to put in a bare foot, and leave it.

The beautiful creek could also turn into a raging stream. When floods came, logs were carried downstream, fences torn down, and the footbridge that Frank had built across the creek was washed away. A flood would cover the entire valley with water.

Little Anne found her job taking warm milk to the kittens at the barn a mixed blessing because she hated the smell of boiled milk as much as she loved the little kittens. She carried the milk as far away as her arm could reach, and with the other hand she held her nose. Once Arnold and Anne were given the job of gate-keepers at haying time. Minnie packed them a lunch and they were sent to play at a gate until the men came with a load of hay, then they were to open the gate and close it behind the wagon so no one had to get off the hay wagon. They ate their lunch, opened the gate, and then went home where there was blackberry pie baking. Because they left the gate open, cows got into a field where they were not supposed to be. In these last days on the farm, Hugo, Fred and Leo helped Minnie do the work in the fields, while Arnold and Anne were too little to work and played around the cool spring and branch and roamed the fields. Erwin was still a baby and was tended by Clara and Elizabeth, taking turns at home.

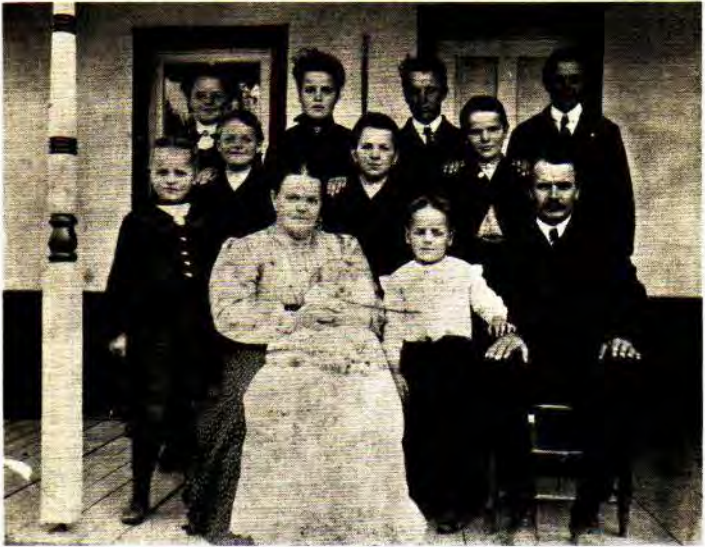

On 12 Feb 1906 the farm was sold to Minnie's cousin Frank Lappe and the family moved to Biehle. This is where the youngest, Dorie, was born that September. After they moved into St. Louis several years later, Barney and Victoria and their children lived in this house.

That Christmas Eve, 1906, Herman Lappe and his wife from St. Louis were visiting. The children had all been told to expect Santa Claus. Anne listened to the others whisper "Be quiet! Santa Claus is coming!" and she grew more and more tense and nervous. When a knock came at the closed door to her parents' room she ran to answer it. There stood a man in a long overcoat with a hat pulled down on his forehead, holding a stick that reached from floor to ceiling. Anne ran back screaming. Finally she calmed down and was led back into the other room. There on the table in the corner stood the most beautiful Christmas tree, with lighted candles, popcorn, cookies and paper chains. Back in the kitchen the table had been set and at each plate was candy, an orange and an apple. The mysterious Santa turned out to be Clara's new husband, familiar Charley Geringer. Uncle Herman told of buggies without horses running in St. Louis and three of the young Pingel children sat on the front porch and pondered this mystery.

In mid-1913 the Pingel family moved to St. Louis. Before this, Hugo had moved to Jackson, Missouri, and Barney, Clara and Lizzie were already married. Leo and Arnold had come about a year earlier. In St. Louis, Frank worked at Weber & Demme Wagon Factory for a salary of $10 per week. Eventually Leo also got a job there and the Pingels moved to a house at 8th & Mullanphy so Frank and his son could come home for their noon meal. Minnie made all of the blue work shirts that they wore. In Anne's first attempt to make Leo a shirt, she set the sleeves in backwards, eliciting many complaints from her uncomfortable brother. It was while they lived in this house that Fred joined the army.

By 1918 they had purchased a home at 4858 Austria Avenue, a 2-story frame with a nice yard for gardening and raising chickens. Here Frank lived until after Minnie's death and his brief marriage to Matilda Jackson. Then in 1922 he and Dora went to Detroit by bus to live with Lizzie. Dora married and stayed in Detroit; Frank returned to St. Louis after a year or two. He spent his later years in the home of his daughter Clara Geringer. He was injured when struck by a car, and afterwards suffered an incapacitating stroke, lingering for several months before his death 3 June 1937.

#53 BERNARD & VICTORIA (Unterreiner) PINGEL
19 Apr 1909

Barney and Victoria were married at St. Joseph Church, Apple Creek. It rained so hard all day that by evening the creeks had flooded and the entire Pingel family, who had come from Biehle for the occasion, had to remain in Apple Creek, being unable to reach home. They started home early the next morning. Barney's 9-year-old sister Anne was delighted with the unexpected holiday from school.

Years later, Victoria reminisced, "One Sunday afternoon there was a nice country dance, (and) my brother took my sister and me along. My mother told him to bring both of us back with him, but I had different plans and said under my breath, 'I am not so sure I will!' because that was the time I met my future husband and he asked me if he could walk me home and I said yes. It was about 3 miles, but I didn't mind it. I felt I had my partner for the rest of my life."

The marriage to Barney Pingel lasted 7 years and "4 days short of 4 months." Four children were born to them before Barney died suddenly of typhoid fever 11 Aug 1916. (A fifth child arrived 8 months later.) He was buried on a day when the rain poured as hard as it had for their wedding day.

"When my husband died, the hardest thing to understand was why, a thousand times why, it had to happen to us," Victoria remembered. "We were so very happy. So I thought about the MEMORARE and I said that with my children every night and it helped more than words can tell." The next few years of her life were spent making ends meet, on her own with five young children. They moved first to her father's farm, and later lived in their own home near the school in Apple Creek. Raising chickens and doing laundry for others helped bring in money to live on.

"There was a very sad affair in our parish," Victoria recalled. "A mother died and left 13 children. I knew the family very well. There were 10 girls and 3 boys; five were already married, three were working and five were in grade school. The first year after the wife's death, I boarded the children for the school year because they lived about 14 miles away from church and school. So he proposed to me, but I said no because I felt I was not good enough to step into her place. At that time I spent 10 weeks in the infirmary where my two daughters were working. My youngest son was about 14 years old at that time. After I came home, I was healthier than I ever was, so that a certain party asked me again to marry him, but again I said no. I started a novena to St. Joseph and before I was through with it, I felt that I should marry him."

She and Joseph Schneier, son of John and Wilhelmina (Hesbach) Schneier (whose first wife Geraldine died 16 Jun 1931 at Cape Hospital after giving birth to her 14th child which died the same day) born and raised in Apple Creek, were married Tuesday 10 Sep 1935 at St. Joseph's. "The morning after we were married, after Mass," she said, "we came home to my place; had breakfast. After breakfast, he went back home to his place of work and I stayed at my home with the children because they were going to school. And on Friday evening, he came for us to go home to his place." Relatives, friends, and neighbors gathered that night for a "good old-time chivery." When everyone had gone home and the children were in bed, as they went upstairs to their room, Joe complained of being very tired and said he should have been in bed sooner. Victoria replied, "Have a good night's rest and in the morning we can talk more and you can show me around."

"After about 30 or 40 minutes," Victoria said, "He called my name and said 'Call a priest; I'm dying.' At first I thought he was dreaming." As he insisted, Victoria sent for the priest and a doctor. "I was afraid he would die before the priest came so I prayed to St. Joseph to keep him alive at least until the priest arrived." It was 20 Sep 1935 when he died; he was 52, and they had been married less than 10 days.

Again alone, Victoria raised the last five Schneier children: Marveline, Jeanne, Robert, Dorothy and Anna Lou, and lived in the St. Louis area where she became the housekeeper/adopted Grandma of 3 children whose mother had died 17 Nov 1942. Mr. Thomas Watkins, their father, wrote that she was loved and remained a part of the family even after her work was done.

She died in St. Louis 18 July 1967, and was buried at St. Maurus Cemetery, Biehle, Missouri.

#8 MARY ANNA (PINGEL) BUDENHOLZER

bap 12 Feb 1867 at St. Joseph, Apple Creek. Her Godparents were Moritz Hunt and Gertrude Koeper. When she was married 7 May 1885 to JOHN BUDENHOLZER, the witnesses were her brother FRANK PINGEL and Susanna BUERCK. John was a miner at Mine LaMotte, and there they lived and raised their two children.

Mary died 24 Mar 1911 at the age of 44 of pernicious anemia, after a 3-month illness. John was ill for 8 months before his death 22 Jun 1916 of stomach cancer. Both were attended by Dr. Slaughter of Fredericktown, and buried from St. Michael's there.

Also, in the 1860 and 1870 Census records he is listed as born in Missouri.

Anton had been a miner, but soon after their marriage in 1874, he and Theresa moved to a farm at Village Creek, near Fredericktown in Madison County. In 1876 Fredericktown had 2,000 inhabitants, 18 stores, 3 hotels, 3 blacksmith and wagon shops, 5 churches and 2 newspapers. In 1885, Anton's younger brother John married Theresa's sister Mary, at Biehle. John and Mary lived at Mine LaMotte, 4 miles north of Fredericktown, a village of 400 souls, with a store, tinshop, bakery and confectionery, tailor, shoe shop and two hotels, centered around the lead mining industry.

Anton and Theresa raised their 10 children on the Village Creek farm.

Anton was a blacksmith and wagonmaker, taking over the business of his father. He made caskets, for which his wife Theresa fabricated the linings. He also kept a dry goods store adjoining his Biehle home, in which Katie and Josie worked. An industrious man, he was the postmaster of Biehle 1896-1903 and 1904-1907. About 1909, he moved his family to St. Libory, Illinois, where he invested in another store, in partnership with a man who had persuaded him that there were great opportunities there, which proved not to be the case. The store failed, and the partner, George Krampfer, who had wished to marry Ida, was rejected. The family moved to Perryville in 1913, living in a large house on Jackson Street.

Anton was a kind man, with a good disposition that generally overruled a quick temper. The family spoke German in Biehle; at St. Libory the language was more 'low-Dutch'. Theresa wrote letters to her daughters in German for all her life, but read the answers they sent in English.

Joe had a sawmill, as well as the large threshing business for which he owned a corn shredder, wheat thresher, and clover huller. He was a man who always worked harder than any of his helpers. Eventually he died of pernicious anemia, aged 59½.

The family canned in gallon jars, and buried potatoes, carrots, turnips, etc., for use between seasons, in a carefully constructed pit, covered with wood for rain to run off. Sauerkraut and green beans were put up in 20 gallon crocks. German was always spoken in their home on the farm near Biehle.

Christina went to the World's Fair in St. Louis by train, and a few years later, when Edgar was born with a club foot, brought him to St. Louis for an operation to correct it. She died of stomach cancer when she was 58.

In the early years of their marriage, Joe tried his hand at mining at Mine LaMotte in Madison County, and their first child was born there.

The Willey family homesteaded land near Meeker, Colorado (Joe & Ed Willey & their mother; Henry Willey also had property there.) The Budenholzers went West to join them. Evidently finding the life too hard and the ground too unyielding, all the homesteaders in the area moved on. Joe & Ed Willey later settled in California, and the Joe Budenholzers went to New Mexico, probably because the Santa Fe RR was hiring there. Joe worked for the Santa Fe as an electrician until his retirement.

Soon after their marriage, Barney & Victoria moved to N.D., near Crete. In spite of the harsh winters when it was sometimes -40° with snow from Oct to Apr, Victoria loved N.D. A span of rope stretched from house to barn let them reach the animals in blinding snowstorms. She carried a gun in the winter when the coyotes became troublesome. They returned to Perry Co. with their two small children sometime before the summer of 1913. Barney worked as a water carrier for the railroad. On 11 Aug 1916, he died suddenly of typhoid fever.

Maude ran the school cafeteria for 5 or 6 years, and later managed the cafeteria at Sun Oil Company. The entire family was active in the local Christian Church in Toledo; Hugo was an elder, Maude a deaconess. Maude taught Sunday School classes and the whole family sang in the choir. Oral, from the time she was a freshman in high school, was church pianist, graduating to organist when the organ was installed.

EARLY NEIGHBORS IN PERRY COUNTY

The first Catholic church at Apple Creek was built at the expense of an early settler, JOSEPH SCHNURBUSCH about 1826. The church was named for his patron saint, St. Joseph, and the community around it came to be known as 'Schnurbusch'. Joseph Schnurbusch and his wife Elisabeth, elderly when the parish was formed, lived to see the first log church replaced in 1836 by a native stone church and were buried from the church in the 1840's when they died in their 90's. As the community gradually lost its identification as Schnurbusch, keeping the older name of Apple Creek, the Schnurbusch family name was carried on by their son FRANCIS, who was married to SARAH WELKER, and their grandson, JOSEPH who married BERNADINA WELKER. The Schnurbusch-Welker connection continued also into the next generation, when three of Joseph's sons married three daughters of JOSEPH & BARBARA (WEISBROD) WELKER. (Living in the area were Welkers from Bavaria as well as Welkers from North Carolina.)

MAURUS BIEHLE, son of JOSEPH & FRANCISCA (BEHRLE), b. 1821 in Baden, came to the U. S. in 1839 with his parents. (The parents returned to Germany after two years.) He worked for 5 years in the store of his uncle, MAURITZ BEHRLE, afterward setting up a mercantile business of his own. His first wife, TERESA WERNER, died after about 10 years of marriage, leaving two or three daughters, and Maurus married again in 1857 to AGNES ERNST. They had 10 children. MAURUS BIEHLE joined Co. C., 78th regiment, Missouri Militia, in 1862 as a sergeant.

Other local residents in Co. C. included HENRY ZOELLNER (1st Lieut), age 25, FRANK SCHUMER (sergeant) 20, and privates: JOHN BERKBUGLER, 21, JAKE BERKBUGLER, 41, BETTA BOHNERT, 41, FRANK GEBHARD, 19, ANTON & JOSEPH GEBHARD, ANTON, BERNHARD, GEORGE & JOHN KIRN, FREDERICK LAPPE, 19, ANTON & FRANK RENNER, MARTIN & WENDELIN REIS, ARMOND RUCH, 20, ANDREW SCHWEIN, 27, HENRY SCHUMER, 26, GOTTFRIED UNTERREINER, 36, JOSEPH UNTERREINER, 18, STEPHAN UN-

TERREINER, 31, PETER WELKER, 43, & MARTIN WINGERT-ER. Other familiar local names are listed in the rosters of Companies A & B: WILLIAM LAUK, sergeant, 24, and privates: ANTON, HENRY & JOSEPH BUCHHEIT, MARK & JOSEPH GERINGER, ALOYS & RAYMOND SCHINDLER, JOHN SCHULTE, ANTON SAUER, 34, PAUL UNTERREINER, 28, and ANTON VOSS, 47.

JOSEPH UNTERREINER had arrived in Perry Co. before 1835 from Baden. ANTON UNTERREINER, probably his brother, landed with his family in New Orleans in Nov 1839, on the same boat with the BIEHLES. Ten of the children of ANTON & GERTRUDE (WALZ) grew up to marry and have families. Their son JOSEPH HENRY b. 1843 married in 1874 BARBARA CATHERINE SCHEMEL and it was their 9th child, Victoria, who was married to BARNEY PINGEL (#53) and their youngest child, Mary Agnes, married AUGUST PINGEL (#43).

FERDINAND ZOELLNER, b. ca 1808, son of PETER and ELISABETH (MAFER), in Langenholthausen, Westphalia, was the earliest of the Zoellners to settle in Perry Co. On 29 May 1840 at St. Joseph Church, he married ANTONETTA DOLL, a girl who had come from the same village, crossing the ocean on the same ship. JOHN ZOELLNER, possibly his brother, came from Westphalia in 1845. His first wife, Catherine Bange, having died, he married ANNA MARY SCHUMER. They had 12 children, but several died very young. A majority of the Perry Co. Zoellners are descended from HENRY ZOELLNER, child of John's 1st marriage (who married DINA LAPPE and had 11 children) and BERNARD ZOELLNER, eldest son of John's 2nd marriage (who married THERESA LAPPE and had 12 children.)

The BLASIVS BUERCK family arrived from Baden in the late 1860's. Four of their daughters married sons of HENRY ZOELLNER. When another of Henry's boys came visiting, Blasius said it appeared the Zoellners were still coming courting and since he was out of daughters he guessed he'd have to make some wooden ones!

MADISON COUNTY MINERS

Many German miners were evidently thrown out of work by the 1844 decline of business activity in Germany, and motivated to emigrate to the United States. Missouri was, at that time, a mining center attractive to them. In 1720, M. LaMotte had discovered lead deposits which have ever since borne his name and which have since been worked almost continuously. In the latter part of the 19th century, large amounts of nickel, cobalt, and copper were also mined here.

PETER BUDENHOLZER was one of this group of miner immigrants, coming as a young man during the 1840's. Later, aboard the Humboldt, came miner JOHANN OEST, and HENRY LAPPE, and their families, the GROTHOFFS, SCHUMERS, and LEGERMANS. Peter Budenholzer chose his wife from among this group. The travel pass of the family of Franz Anton Schumer is still in existence, and demonstrates how lengthy was the process of immigration. The pass lists the name and age of each family member, and then asks 15 questions, beginning with 'religion?' The pass is dated 7 July 1845 at Arnsberg, Germany, and their ship arrived at New Orleans 16 Dec 1845. Over five months on the road, they still faced the trip up the Mississippi River to Missouri, and west to Madison County.

As mining prospered in Madison County, other improvements were needed. In 1851, a 42-mile-long plank road was laid from Iron Mountain to Ste. Genevieve, wide enough for one-way traffic with turnouts at frequent intervals. Eastbound traffic took precedence because those teams were usually more heavily loaded with iron ore. It was constructed by laying heavy timbers lengthwise on the ground and then oak planks eight feet long over these, nailed down. Wooden bridges were constructed over creeks, and saw mills were placed every few miles, constantly at work sawing the oak boards that wore out rapidly with the heavy traffic.

When a depression of significant proportions developed in the 1890's, prices of lead fell. By late 1892 it was below 4¢. Wages were cut several times; many men left the district. The bottom of the depression came in 1897. Lead was often impossible to sell, even at the low price of 2.77¢ per pound.

PETER BUDENHOLZER (b. ca 1815) settled in Mine laMotte and worked in the mines. He was married 24 Feb 1846 to ANNA MARIA LEGERMAN, dau of John and Elizabeth, who was b. 16 Apr 1822 in Allendorf, Kries Arnsberg, Germany; d. 28 Nov 1880 at Mine laMotte. In 1847, Peter Budenholzer bid $1.62 for a pew in the newly constructed church of St. Michael. Their children were:

(PETER) ANTON, b. Apr 1847

JOHN b. 1 Jan 1849

(MARY) ELIZABETH, b. Jun 1851

Peter Budenholzer died at the age of 35, and was buried from St. Michael's 22 Sep 1851. Both of the Budenholzer sons were employed at Mine laMotte, under Foreman HERMAN PRIGGEL, who had immigrated from Dusseldorf, Germany, in 1853. He became their good friend and his daughter Emma remembered the Budenholzers of Village Creek as "excellent people and pillars of St. Michael church."

ANTON and JOHN BUDENHOLZER traveled to Biehle, MO, to marry daughters of ANTON PINGEL. Their sister, ELIZABETH BUDENHOLZER married (about 1869) another lead miner, MADISON BANES, and raised a large family. She had 9 children by 1900, when the census was taken.

As difficult as travel was, before the days of paved roads, The German settlers in Madison and Perry Counties managed to keep in touch. They also took their goods to market at Perryville and Cape Girardeau; muddy roads made it a whole day's journey. There were even occasional trading trips by boat to New Orleans.

The German communities kept German as their everyday language, although many of the settlers, especially the men who were doing business among the entire population of the area, soon learned some English. Immigrants from Prussia, in particular, were eager students. They had left a country which had the highest educational standard in all of Europe in the 1800's, due to the fact that the Prussian government viewed a good education as the first step in the development of Prussia's strong army.

THE GERMAN IMMIGRATION

In 1829, a series of letters appeared in a German periodical describing the experiences and observations of Gottfried Duden, a German who had lived several years on a farm in Missouri. These were collected into a book, the appeal of which lay in its informal nature. It portrayed everyday life on a Missouri farm, from spring labor to bountiful harvests. It told of the absence of overbearing soldiers and inquisitive tax collectors. Though the United States had about the same population as Prussia, the standing army of Prussia was 50 times as large. In America, there was no compulsory military service to postpone marriage and an independent start in life. Prussia had passed a law in 1820 making it a crime punishable by imprisonment to urge anyone to emigrate, and a further decree of 1845 prohibited the reading in public of any letter or paper which had the same effect, even indirectly. In America, there was no censorship, and all citizens were equal before the law. After a brief customs examination on entering the country, the continent lay open to the newcomer to travel wherever and whenever he wished. This book did much to inspire German immigration.

Economic improvement was the main goal of the five million Germans who came into the United States between 1820 and 1900. Beginning in 1844, harvests were poor in Germany and business activity decreased. Many Germans were hungry and out of work. The many rulers of the small German states tried to suppress the democratic ideas which were released by a revolt in France in March, 1844. Revolutions, aimed at achieving a united Germany with political equality for everyone, failed and many, who felt they could not live under the tyranny of the German ruling classes, fled to America. The great attraction for the German farmers was cheap, good land. Europeans learned that America was a land that rewarded labor. One day's work was equivalent to an acre fit to grow corn. From two or three years' savings, the industrious workman could buy a farm already cleared and provided with the necessary buildings. The land-hungry

German had trouble understanding a society in which the sum he now paid as annual rental would purchase complete title of a farm twice as large as his present holding. Or, if already a landholder, he was dazzled by the knowledge that he might sell his possessions, pay out two-thirds of the proceeds for transporting his family to America, and yet have enough left to buy four times as much land as he had originally owned.

Few immigrants departed as unattached individuals. The first to go was likely to be the chosen emissary of parents or neighbors; the later ones went to join the pioneers and round out the family circle.

Most of the emigrants were from the interior of the continent and to them the Atlantic was a place of storms and shipwrecks. Agents and shippers used their publicity and advertisements to stress the seaworthiness of vessels, the skill of the sailors, and accuracy of modern nautical science. Letters home from the relatives who had gone ahead gave weight to these reassurances.

The Atlantic crossing was not only expensive, but since the movement of ships depended on the fluctuation of commerce, sometimes America-bound ships thronged the ports; at other times the harbors were empty. Reaching the sea was also an obstacle. The freight wagons returning from Basel and Strasbourg to LeHavre carried passengers willing to travel the slow way, while persons with more money forwarded their heavier belongings by the freighters, and themselves used the more rapid stage lines. The Weser River led through the fields of Hanover and Westphalia to Bremen, which rose in importance as a port after an 1827 treaty with the United States, which made it profitable for Bremen to dredge and dyke the outlet to Bremerhaven. This led to the large traffic in tobacco to Bremen from the United States, and the answering need for emigrants as a 'return ballast.' By 1843, Bremen equaled, if it did not surpass, LeHavre in popularity. The great freight wagons that had once returned empty to Bremen, provided accommodations. In addition, a wagon service was organized for emigrants from the south. Most emigrants, however, started towards the west in the style of their American contemporaries -- in covered wagons. The family carriage was arched with sailcloth, and the interior packed with women, children and baggage. The men and older boys walked outside, leading the horses. Long caravans set out from the German-French border in this fashion, camping each evening by the wayside and frugally consuming the supply of food that was to support them across the Atlantic. In Bavaria, whole village communities sold their property for whatever they could get, and set out, often with their clergyman at their head. Many of the prosperous craftsmen and leading citizens of Westphalia made the journey to a new life in America in the middle of the 19th century.

Emigrants displayed remarkable courage and resourcefulness . . . Even in flight from persecution, injustice, or quite simply starvation, surely theirs was not the easy way out. The decision to uproot their lives, the sacrifices to raise the price of passage, the perseverance to obtain passports and the struggle overland to a port were steps not easily taken. They were the most vulnerable of travelers; most had never left their villages before, let alone the region. Traveling by train was a terrifying novelty to most of them, a journey that would carry them within hours to a country where they understood neither language, customs, nor currency. Yet, they set out bravely, carrying their most precious possessions, lured by the promise of a land and a way of life so remote that it staggered the imagination.¹

During the active season there were always several thousand in the city awaiting the hour of departure. The delay might extend from one to six weeks. In the meantime, they lodged in the cheapest houses, sometimes several families to a room, cooking and washing and keeping as much as possible outdoors. At the dock, they often saw that the ship they were to take looked frighteningly small. In the early days, the sailing brig might be a scant 20 feet wide, and 124 feet long. A ship this size would have a crew of about 15, and be scheduled to carry about 80 passengers. Passengers were advised to carry 180 pounds of food. Many immigrants could not afford that much, and many deaths on the voyages were a result of the food shortage. The shipboard accommodations for these passengers were often achieved by dividing the hold into three compartments with the hanging of large pieces of canvas. One compartment was for married couples and children, one for unmarried men and one for single women. The bunks were crammed into every available inch of space, and were barely big enough for a person to sleep. The overhead was low, and the air was thick, and choking. The only light came from the main hatch. After dark, a few weak, smoking, kerosene lanterns were lit and hung along the side of the ship. When the seas were rough, the hatch was closed, and the passengers lost their chief source of light and fresh air. Seasickness was common, and scurvy, caused by the lack of fresh fruits and vegetables during the voyage, took its toll of these steerage passengers. Any illness that had been carried aboard, spread quickly in the confined quarters, and some voyages buried many of their passengers overboard long before reaching America.

By the 1890's, steamship companies had realized that provision of some primitive conveniences for their poorest passengers was good business that could turn a profit. Immigrants still brought their own bedding and eating utensils, but there were stewards to give them some service, and three meals were served daily. It was still customary for passengers to bring rations to supplement what they were served. By this time, there was also a doctor on board. The more rapid voyages that came about because of the increased use of steam engines after the Civil War made ocean transport cheaper for the travelers. For the many who landed at the port of New Orleans in the mid 1800's, passage up the river was cheap; to St. Louis it varied from $2-$2.50, according to the stand of the water. And in later years, as the railroad stretched across America, at one time it was possible to travel from New York to St. Louis for only a dollar.

Fr. Gaydos, Chancellor

FATHER GAYDOS
New Chancellor

The child of your parent's brother or sister is your 1st cousin. However, your 1st cousin's child is not your 2nd cousin, but your 1st cousin once removed. The child of your 1st cousin once removed is your 1st cousin twice removed, and his child is your 1st cousin three times removed.

Your 2nd cousin is your grandparent's brother's (or sister's) grandchild. That 2nd cousin's child is your 2nd cousin once removed, his child your 2nd cousin twice removed, and so on.

And your 3rd cousin? It's your great-grandparent's brother's (or sister's) great-grandchild. The 3rd cousin's child is your third cousin once removed, his child is your 3rd cousin twice removed.

The grandchild of your brother or sister is your grandnephew or grandniece.

The sister or brother of your grandparent is your great-aunt or great-uncle.

The sister or brother of your great-grandparent is your great-grand-aunt or great-grand-uncle.

Whew! Isn't this grand?
Or is it great?
